About The Roundtable

Along with Planet Underground TV and American Locator Magazine, Planet Underground’s annual Roundtable Event features critical discussions on the future of safe excavation, and economic benefits of proactive safety measures regarding underground utility infrastructure. This event, live and unscripted, filmed at Planet Underground’s headquarters in Manteno, IL brings you a unique first-hand look into real challenges and solutions considered by top industry professionals. Groups of 3 or 4 individuals from different industry segments are filmed together at a round table and given a “hot” topic in damage prevention to discuss freely in front of our cameras. In addition 6-member Roundtable Panels of experts take questions from the entire event audience.

Over 100 professionals attended Planet Underground’s Roundtable in December 2017. Together they shared a wide array of innovative ideas towards reducing and ultimately eliminating damages and injury from underground utility projects. This event marks an industry-first milestone in moving discussions on damage prevention towards real-world solutions backed by technological innovation and advances in communication among all parties involved, with excavators at the forefront.

It is our mission to create this new forum to bring all parties involved more closely together, to hear the expertise and opinion of those they may never otherwise be connected to, and ultimately, to have this new communication bring us all closer to zero damages for workers in the field and the general public.

Roundtable 2017 Testimonials

“What I learned from the event: No one solution will end these difficulties in the utility business. But multiple, overlapping efforts will.”

Steve Rienks, Director of Engineering, American Survey and Engineering

“The Roundtable was an opportunity to discuss critical issues with key stakeholders across the industry. Reinforced over the two days is that no silver bullet exists, no one single thing fixes the problem. To get damage prevention to the level of success required will take a collaborative effort on a number of fronts.”

Eric Swartley, Sr. Manager Pipeline and Public Safety, UGI

“I think the Roundtable is a great opportunity to candidly talk to people about what’s going on. We get to have conversations about what is important to us, and it’s not filtered. We’re not out there trying to sell things...we’re out there talking about the problems that we run into every day.”

Cory Mass, Applications Engineer - Underground Solutions, Vermeer

“Trades shows are great, but one of the things that I enjoyed about just driving down here, was the fact that I didn’t feel like I had to be ‘on’.”

Tom Hall, Vice President of Business Development, KorTerra

“Everyone has such different backgrounds and experiences...just being able to talk about those, really helps bring awareness to each other’s struggles. If we can see that other person’s point of view, we can really come together as an industry to make positive changes.”

Tracy Lipinski, MP Nexlevel

The roundtable has been great. I said to someone...are there really people in this room that can make a difference? The answer was well, I’m not sure. I said, then let’s find those people, let’s get them into this as well. You sit them down here for a day or two. We will change their minds. There’s too much knowledge here, from...contractors, locators, utilities, municipalities...everyone’s point of view needs to be understood.”

Duane Rodgers, CEO, Pelican Corp

“Fantastic event. We’re learning..it gives us a great perspective, let’s us step outside of our little window beyond what seems important just to us. It lets us see what’s truly going on in other aspects of the industry that we would normally not get exposed to.”

Alan Haddy, President, UTTO Inc.

“It’s my first year here, and I do believe it’s worthwhile. It’s not just Q3 that struggles with problems like this, it’s everybody that struggles with problems like this. If you bring it out into the open, then things might get changed.”

Jon Moulton, VP, Q3 Contracting

“That’s why we get involved with things like Planet Underground. We consider this to be a ‘best practice.’”

Scott Merchant, Head of Risk Engineering, XL Catlin

“I think it’s a great opportunity to see what challenges people have on the day-to-day level. It allows some freedom to get into discussions that you might not have at a traditional trade show, where they’re just trying to push their products.”

Mike Klonsinski, President, Berntsen International
